Fee	As an insurance broker, we offer advisory services. The fee – known as brokerage – for our advisory, intermediary and support work is generally borne by the insurance company, i.e. the brokerage is included in the insurance premium. Any deviation from this must be expressly agreed between us and the client. For broking net products in particular, a separate fee agreement is usually stipulated, which obliges the client to pay the fee. Net products are products for which the brokerage fee is not included in the insurance premium. Our company does not receive a fee in the form of other benefits.
